The Role of Human Factors in Home Health Care Sep 23 2022 The rapid growth of home health care has raised many unsolved issues and will have consequences that are far too broad for any one group to analyze in their entirety. Yet a major influence on the safety, quality, and effectiveness of home health care will be the set of issues encompassed by the field of human factors research—the discipline of applying what is known about human capabilities and limitations to the design of products, processes, systems, and work environments. To address these challenges, the National Research Council began a multidisciplinary study to examine a diverse range of behavioral and human factors issues resulting from the increasing migration of medical devices, technologies, and care practices into the home. Its goal is to lay the groundwork for a thorough integration of human factors research with the design and implementation of home health care devices, technologies, and practices. On October 1 and 2, 2009, a group of human factors and other experts met to consider a diverse range of behavioral and human factors issues associated with the increasing migration of medical devices, technologies, and care practices into the home. This book is a summary of that workshop, representing the culmination of the first phase of the study.

The health care that results varies considerably in its safety, effectiveness, and efficiency, as well as in its quality and cost. Health Care Comes Home reviews the state of current knowledge and practice about many aspects of health care in residential settings and explores the short- and long-term effects of emerging trends and technologies. By evaluating existing systems, the book identifies design problems and imbalances between technological system demands and the capabilities of users. Health Care Comes Home recommends critical steps to improve health care in the home. The book's recommendations cover the regulation of health care technologies, proper training and preparation for people who provide in-home care, and how existing housing can be modified and new accessible housing can be better designed for residential health care. The Future of Home Health Care Jun 20 2022 Individuals with disabilities, chronic conditions, and functional impairments need a range of services and supports to keep living independently. However, there often is not a strong link between medical care provided in the home and the necessary social services and supports for independent living. Home health agencies and others are rising to the challenges of meeting the needs and demands of these populations to stay at home by exploring alternative models of care and payment approaches, the best use of their workforces, and technologies that can enhance independent living. All of these challenges and opportunities lead to the consideration of how home health care fits into the future health care system overall. On September 30 and October 1, 2014, the Institute of Medicine and the National Research Council convened a public workshop on the future of home health care. The workshop brought together a spectrum of public and private stakeholders and thought leaders to improve understanding of the current role of Medicare home health care in supporting aging in place and in helping high-risk, chronically ill, and disabled Americans receive health care in their communities. Through presentations and discussion, participants explored the evolving role of Medicare home health care in caring for Americans in the future, including how to integrate Medicare home health care into new models for the delivery of care and the future health care marketplace. The workshop also considered the key policy reforms and investments in workforces, technologies, and research needed to leverage the value of home health care to support older Americans, and research priorities that can help clarify the value of home health care. This summary captures important points raised by the individual speakers and workshop participants.

Visit Tracker for Home Health Nurses Aug 30 2020 Unlike many specialties in the nursing profession, the home care nurse's work setting changes daily as they travel from location to location, home to home, visiting each assigned patient. Working alone most of the time, the home health nurse must be organized and autonomous. To further complicate things, many work for multiple agencies at the same time, and each agency has its own unique protocols for recording after-visit reports into their computer system at the end of the day. This handy Visit Tracker for Home Health Nurses is a one-of-a-kind system for gathering visit details into one bound location. Logically set up, it prompts the nurse to record all of the pertinent details about each visit as the day progresses, thus streamlining the process of inputting patient detail into each agency's computer program at the end of the day. Where appropriate, check boxes are provided to quickly indicate standard assessment elements, but blank write-in fields are also included for those areas where an entry is required. Each record includes a narrative section at the very end for capturing pertinent information not recorded elsewhere. A Patient Visit Log located at the front of the book where the Table of Contents typically is found can be updated daily for quick reference and includes: Patient Name, Visit Date, Agency Name, and Page Number. The journal will accommodate up to 60 visits and includes a sample completed assessment at the back of the book. · Gathers agency, patient, physician, medication, and medical history prior to any actual assessment or treatment. · Prompts the nurse through standard assessment items while also allowing for entry of additional non-standard notations. · Logical arrangement makes it quick and easy to extract all of the detail necessary for completing each patient file at the end of the day. · Chronological arrangement makes it easy to locate a specific record. · Patient Visit Log at the front of the book further enhances organization by letting the nurse set up their own Table of Contents. · Each patient record consists of a two-page spread, each page 8-1/2" x 11". · Each book will accommodate up to 60 patient visits. · Bound softcover format keeps everything in one place and fits easily into a supply bag.
